

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and method of evaluating a leak detection test that is performed on a headspace of a fuel system. The system includes a fuel vapor pressure management apparatus, an algorithm that calculates an in-use rate value by dividing a number of monitoring events by a number of driving events of the vehicle, and a computer that compares the in-use rate value to a standard value.